BACKGROUND

The IAEA Emergency Preparedness Review (EPREV) service appraises, independently and against IAEA safety standards, Member States' preparedness for responding to nuclear and radiological emergencies.

Between 2004 and 2013, 32 EPREV missions, including follow-up missions, were carried out in 30 Member States and completed by experts from 30 countries. This Technical Meeting will consider the lessons learned from the past ten years of implementing EPREV missions, in order to strengthen the EPREV service.

OBJECTIVES

The Technical Meeting aims to promote an open discussion on:

- The current status of, and trends related to, the implementation of EPREV missions;
- Experiences related to the implementation of EPREV missions;
- The self assessment process and results;
- Ways to strengthen EPREV missions and follow-up actions.

TARGET AUDIENCE

The target audience of this Technical Meeting includes national managers, planners and responders involved in the development of emergency preparedness and response arrangements at the national, local or facility level.

Information on participant registration is available on the Technical Meeting web page. The deadline for submitting requests for participation is 16 May 2014.
